POINTS TO CONSIDER IN CHARTER MAKING.

Greater New York's Charter Commission and the Committee on Draft, that will prepare a skeleton of the charter, will have plenty of material with which to work. Ideas, good, sound and practical, are flowing in fast from the Journal's readers, and every one of them will be brought to the attention of the Commissioners, and every one that is adopted will entitle its originator to a prize of $100.

The Committee on Draft will continue at its task through the Summer, and the results of its labors will be given to the Commission early in the Autumn.

"Hot?" asked Mr. Dunn yesterday, when a caller ventured an opinion to that effect.

"You are mistaken, my boy. This is not unusual weather," said he. "The highest point reached by the thermometer to-day was SI degrees, and that is ordinary for this time of year. The only thing that makes people think it is warm is the high percentage of humidity. There was 91 per cent of humidity that made people say it was hot, accompliance of the might be acco

In the Greater New York problem the proper districting of its great and wide-spread proportions will be one of the first requirements. It is

The sections of the greater city should be so designated that one or two capital letters after the word 'New York' on a letter will indicate the exact locality in either Brooklyn, Long island City, Straien Island, or elsewhere. I suggest that Long Island City, Grosenpoint and Williamsburg be known as New York, E. D.—Eastern Division; that Brooklyn, Fightush, Jamaica, etc., be known as New York, E. knows as much about heat as a Prohibitionist does about whiskey. It is all a matter of statistics with it. To Farmer Dunn hot weather simply means that a certain column of mercury passes a certain notch on a scale. If he had to take his observations wrapped in furs, with icicles hanging from the corners of his mouth, he would declare it hot if a small boy had stood his old thermometer on its head or touched a lighted eighrette to its business end. Little heed he pays to the sweat of his brow or the ruined collar of his shirt of many colors.

Yesterday was hot. Every one in New York knew it was hot except the man of thermometer and humidity guages. He said it wasn't hot. All he had to show for his defiance of public opinion was some scratchy marks on a couple of cards, which, he said, meant that yesterday was an ordinary, average, pleasant day. It was the humidity that made people say it was hot, as usual.

the results of its labors will be given to the Commission early in the Autumn. It is easy to perceive, therefore, that it needs suggestions now and continuously until the preidminary framework of the document of so much importance to the greater municipality is finished. Following are hints that have been received by the Journal in the contest of ideas:
